Where Coffee Becomes a Language

Born from fertile soil and skilled hands, Indonesia is writing a new chapter in its coffee civilization.

More than 10,000 coffee shops in Indonesia now stand as proof that coffee is no longer just a drink,

it has become a language of connection, a space for creation, and the heartbeat of today's generation.

Where Consumption Becomes Culture

In a single year, Indonesia consumes 4.8 million bags of coffee or 288,000 tons of energy and stories flowing across the nation.

The industry is valued at USD 16.83 billion, yet its cultural significance stretches far beyond what numbers can capture.

Coffee has evolved into a vast ecosystem

From farmers, creators, workers, communities, and seekers of inspiration, they create a constantly moving current that breaks through boundaries and opens up space for anyone who wants to be a part of it.
